You will be able to post or reply messages after register as a member.

Watch Your Language.

Please respect each other and be polite with your words. Please remember to agree to disagree. What is good for one may not suitable for another. Please support others in their health decisions for themselves. Do not use all CAPS when posting messages or use Special Characters in the subject line.

No Abuse and Spam.

Do not create usernames, post, email or send private messages that are false, misleading, offensive, off topic, flaming, baiting, insults, advertisement, competitor web page links, employment listings, request or offering illegal substances, items for sale, harassment, obscene, profane, sexually-orientated, hateful, threatening, invasive of someone's privacy, or otherwise in violation of any laws. Do not post addresses or links to other forums or blogs. Members create such message will be banned from the forum.

Members open links or URL's in posts at their own risk. However, links posted that are in violation of any of our rules may also be subject to censure.

Be Descriptive.

Please create a short descriptive title and post your message under appropriate category or thread. This will direct attention to your post more quickly than a general subject line such as "Help" or "Have a question." Avoid meta-discussion. Do not talk about the thread or post itself, please stay on topic. Do not type one line message or post "Me too," "I agree", "Well said" as these messages will be removed.

Keep Your Privacy.

Protect your identity and privacy if you wish to maintain online anonymity. Do not post personal information or contact information of your own or other people, such as full name, phone number, address and email address. Keep personal conversation to email or private message if your conversation is directed at one other person and is of no interest to anyone else.

Be Honest.

One person, one account. Do not create multiple accounts or impersonate another person or member in order to solicit information or gain access to the forum. Do not post copyrighted material or copy and paste from other web sites and publications. Share information in your own words.

Report Abuse.

You can report a post if you see something violating these rules or needing attention. Do not react or reply on the forums to abusive or problem posts, thereby creating more work for moderators who have to remove inappropriate posts. Deletion of individual posts will be handled at the discretion of administration and/or moderators.

Any concerns about our policies, rules or guidelines should be sent privately to the Moderators or Administrator. Any queries, concerns, arguments or discussion about a moderator's decisions, actions or behavior should not be discussed in public. You may instead respectfully contact the moderator in private, or administrator if the situation is unable to be resolved.
